

Hannes Knoetze

NWU, South Africa

Title: Discipleship as comfort of Christ-connectedness in a globalised world with a FOMO.

Abstract:

In a globalised world it is important to stay connected otherwise you might miss out on some important stuff. Most emerging adults live with a FOMO (fear of missing out). In a globalised world it is important for emerging adults to build and maintain an online profile. The tragedy is that staying connected in the globalised world in many instances disconnect us from our immediate environment with profound implications for families, children and youth. Online connectedness gives people power, but it also makes people especially emerging adults vulnerable. It is in this regard that the article will argue the importance of discipleship, which might be a strange concept in certain context, as Christ-connectedness in a world where many face rejection, despair, loneliness and worthlessness.