

THE MISSION OF THE CHURCH IN MITIGATING HUMAN TRAFFICKING; AN EAST AFRICAN CONCERN

Faith Lugazia

The consumerism theory which demand an individual, group or country to consume goods and services in large quantities for better life or economy, has for worse wounded Africans in general and East Africans in particular. People have run into different practices regardless of its effect in either short time or destroy the future of the one completely.

This paper has chosen to address “Human Trafficking “ topic by calling Christian Churches in East Africa to mitigate the practices since although the practitioners aim at bettering lives, from economical constraints in the continent, Its negative impact is the denial of their dignity among other things.

Aim

The paper will address the reality on the ground in East Africa on human trafficking.

1. Factors contributing to human trafficking.
2. Awareness among FBO on human trafficking
3. Suggests tools to FBO which can help mitigate human trafficking.

The argument of this paper is, if a faith-based organization keep silent on this dehumanizing and diabolic practices, the FBO then denies itsr call of liberating God’s people. Hence, it stands to be judged as an unfaithful servant.
